

Hello!

I'm writing to follow up with you regarding the accreditation standard II team meeting we had this afternoon. We began with very brief introductions, and each person shared three words that came to their minds when they heard the word "accreditation." We used these as a jumping-off point to talk about the overall purpose of accreditation, what the timeline and process looks like, and what our role will be for standard II. We spent just a few minutes looking at standard II together, and then finished up by talking about the next steps: each person is on the hook to have read through standard II and to bring at least one piece of "evidence" with them to that meeting.

That's it in a tiny nutshell! Earlier this evening I sent you an invitation to access some materials via Office 365, so feel free to poke around that folder at your convenience. I also included the presentation as an attachment here in case that is helpful.

I know your time is extremely valuable, so at this point I leave it to you to determine whether you feel like you have enough to go on at the moment, or whether you are interested in meeting face to face to talk more before our next group meeting on June 13. We can certainly work to make that happen, just let me know.
